

Cultural Resources

Visit us on jmt.com

JMT's Cultural Resources staff members are experts in the fields of history, architectural history, and archaeology.

We support federal, state, and local agencies and organizations as they strive to balance the current built environment and future needs of communities with the obligations and expectations associated with historic and archaeological preservation. We have over 30 full-time staff based in offices up and down the east coast, and in Texas and Michigan, and have an excellent record of completing projects on time and in compliance with regulations. JMT's Richmond, VA Cultural Resource team is currently providing many services to the energy sector.

Archaeology

JMT offers full service archaeological services. Our team is adept at addressing the challenges that develop when managing complex projects or studying complex sites.

Architectural Survey and Documentation

JMT's Cultural Resources staff are experienced in conducting architectural surveys and documentation throughout the United States.

Public Involvement

JMT's staff are noted specialists in the public involvement process as it pertains to cultural resources. Our extensive training and experience make JMT the ideal choice to interact with concerned citizens and organizations.

Section 106 Appliance

JMT provides an all-inclusive program that integrates cultural resources into these projects, ensuring that the necessary steps are taken to obtain the required clearances.

- Determination of Effects reports
- FCC 620/621 forms
- Historic structures surveys
- National Historic Landmark nominations
- National Register determinations of eligibility
- National Register nominations
- State Register nominations
- Section 106 coordination
- Section 4(f) evaluations
- Phase I and II Archaeology surveys and reports
- Phase III Archaeological data recovery projects

